The App Guide to Emotions and Autism

Children and adolescents with autism have difficulty with the understanding and regulation of emotions such as sadness, anger, affection and anxiety. With the increased popularity of the iPad comes an opportunity to support emotional education and management using technology which is engaging for children on the autism spectrum.

In this new workshop, Tony Attwood and Bronwyn Sutton will present a unique day which combines Tony's extensive knowledge of emotions and ASD with Bronwyn's experience professionally evaluating apps which support emotional education and management.

Who should attend?

Parents, carers, educational professional and therapists supporting children with autism aged 4 to 17.
